Lisa Corvese, a former Reuters and Standard & Poor's executive, has joined investment analytics provider Pertrac as managing director of global business strategy, to help Pertrac take advantage of a growing number of potential clients as assets under management by the industry increases.

Corvese was most recently global head of client relationship management at fund administration technology vendor GlobeOp Financial Services, and spent six years between 2002 and 2008 as managing director at S&P, running global data operations, then client sales and services. Earlier in her career, she was president of Computershare's insider trading software vendor Restricted Stock Systems, and was a new business development executive at Reuters.
